

Data Protection Authority Listing

The DPA (Data Protection Authority) is the agency within each European Union country that is responsible for GDPR (General Data Protection Regulation) assistance and enforcement.

A Data Protection Authority handles reports of data breaches, mediates issues like data subject access requests and works to educate their country about best practices in keeping digital data secure. The Supervisory Authority is which particular Data Protection Authority has jurisdiction over a particular matter.

As either a data controller or data processor, you will be responding to requests for data from users' of your system. Per Article 12 of the GDPR you may need to inform them of which supervisory authority they can escalate to if you exceed the initial 30 day grace period for a request.
